ESSENTIAL RESPONSIBILITIES:

Build Relationships- Teaching Assistants organize significant time in activities that build relationships with young people. These activities include educational, enrichment, and sports programs.

Plan Activities- Teaching Assistants plan activities that support the objectives of the organization where they are employed. This includes assessing the needs and interests of the group, developing the programs based on that assessment and administering the program's implementation.

Provide Mentoring and Counseling-As trust builds, youth may rely on their Teaching Assistants for mentoring related to their own developments. Teaching Assistants should also be prepared to serve as counselors in times of crisis.

Teach Values-Youth learn life principles through values-based curriculum of the youth program as well as through actions they witness in their leaders. Teaching Assistants must consider what the words they use and the decisions they make teach young people about life values.

Develop Leadership- Teaching Assistants teach and develop leadership skills in young people by giving them responsibilities and holding them accountable. This part of a Teaching Assistant's job is key to the youth's development into a responsible adult.

Consider Safety- Teaching Assistants have responsibility for the well-being of young people placed in their care. They should take into consideration appropriate adult supervision and follow the COVID-19 Safety plans.
